WARSAW DOWNED
BY LOCAL HIGHMaroon and White Win by 30 to 0—Jones Distinguishes Himself.

Mishawaka retrieved itself yesterday afternoon with a 30 to 0 victory over Warsaw. The first quarter found the locals at the long end of a 24 to 6 count and acting Coach Semler substituted second string men for the remainder of the "tilt."

The game opened with Warsaw receiving the ball and immediately losing it on downs. The Maroon backfield pulled off a pretty series of end runs and Jones carried the ball across for the first touchdown. Warsaw again received the ball and lost it on the first play. After several neat plays Brady crossed the line on a plunge making the count 12 to 0.

Following the second touchdown Mishawaka received and scored immediately, Jones carrying the "pill." Mottice was put in as left half and Jones shifted to right. Gage retiring from the game. On the first play Mottice ran 70 yards for a touchdown and the quarter ended with Mishawaka at the long end of 24 to 0 count.

The second half opened with several substitutes playing for the locals who started playing a defensive game.

The contest was never in doubt from the moment the whistle blew until Mottice crossed the goal for the fifth and final count. Owing to the condition of the field the Maroon and White failed to kick a successful goal.

Much credit is due Mottice who dazzled the Warsaw defense with his long gains.

"LITTLE WOMEN" AT TEMPLE

Monday and Tuesday

Filled with humor, pathos and delicate sentiment, "Little Women," which comes to the Temple Monday and Tuesday, is a lavender scented picture of New England during the days of the civil war, and its numerous home touches, its bits of romance and its gentle pathos are as effective in the photograph as they were in the pages of Louisa M. Alcott's famous novel of the same name. The photograph is of unusual historic interest inasmuch as the scenes were filmed in and about the home of Miss Alcott in Concord, Mass., where she wrote the story. The cast is an unusually strong one.

CAR DAMAGED IN COLLISION.

An Overland car driven by Fred Hawkins collided, Saturday afternoon, with the Beiger furniture truck driven by Harold Woodward, on North Church st., at the top of the hill. From stories told by witnesses of the collision, Woodward was at the right side of the street, going south. Hawkins kept the center of the roadway. When about half way up the incline Woodward was forced to turn to avoid hitting several vehicles standing along the side of the street. Hawkins' car was hit as he was turning to the right. Neither drivers were injured. The lighter car was badly damaged.

"CHECKERS" AT THE TEMPLE TODAY.

Owing to the success that attended the film production of "Checkers" at the Temple theatre recently, and the numerous requests that it play a return engagement, the play will again be shown at the Temple today. It is a sizzling melodrama filled with thrills of the kind which make the auditors hold on to their chairs. It should again draw crowded houses if merit counts for anything.

MAN IN THE STREET

In Chicago clubs are forming to restrict the exchange of Christmas presents in order to avoid the high cost of giving. One proposes a club of 10, each of whom will give the other nine a check for $100, and then all tear the checks up. If we belonged to any Chicago club like that we would insist upon giving and tearing being furnished while the gang was assembled behind closed doors.

They are getting ready to start something—the fellows who are taking about sugar at 25 cents a pound. Some last straw of that character is going to give this country a severe headache before the winter is over, if the fools are permitted to trifle with a public already in bad humor.

The Toledo Blade says profiteering in food and rents is more galling than burglary. Only in the eyes of the law. The people generally regard burglary as less offensive, since that sort of robbery is frequently caused by the desperation of want.

Did You Ever?
"Philipp, I think you married me for money."

"Well, dear, I believe I earned it, don't you?"

The police of New York are organizing, which reminds us that New York city sent 180,000 men to war, and that most of these are in the American Legion and will see New York through when treason makes its appearance.

We don't pretend to know just what scheme of education is best for the children, but above all things teach the children how to think straight.

It is said Sir Edward Geddes, the British minister of transport, used to be a bartender in the United States. What we want to know is, are they bringing this up in England now to boost or knock him?

The doctors report that Prest Wilson's appetite is sharpening. We are not exactly a dietitian, but we can tell the president that whenever the appetite is sharp enough to cut through a pile of corned beef and cabbage, there will be nothing to prevent him from walloping a few senators.

The Detroit News says men flatter merely to protect themselves from women who flirt. They do not. They flatter because they are fools enough to think they get by with that sort of guff. Besides, there is not one in a million who wants protection from a woman who flirts.

Living in a damp part of the city, Charles Roy has contracted rheumatism, and someone has recommended the wearing of different colored shoes as an alleviative. He tried them for the first time Friday, and can now walk without a limp.

"Tanan Blue," the football expert of The News-Times, says in the course of an article on the South Bend high school team: "Coach Burnham announces that he is ready for Logansport!" What does it mean?

It seems now that almost everybody is ready for peace except the crazy poet d'Annunzio and the wild politicians of the American senate.

The government announces a crop of 2,300,000,000 bushels of corn—and not a drop to drink.

When you get down to brass tacks much of the world's trouble is due to leadership that is utterly selfish, unpatriotic, vicious, degenerate, wicked and ignorant. The world needs more character and intelligence than appear to be operating in front at present.

A Good Laugh

By Winifred Black

The president of Northwestern university in Chicago made a speech the other day, and he said that one of the greatest assets of the Christian religion is a sense of humor.

"We should learn what keeps the Almighty steady," said Prest' Hough, "for even He who sits in the heavens laughs."

I don't know Prest' Hough and probably never shall know him, but there is certainly something about this man that I like.

Whatever else he is or is not, does or does not, there's common sense in his makeup, and when you've said that you've said a great deal.

Laugh? Why, one good laugh is worth all the bottles of medicine ever put up by any druggist on earth, and I'd sooner have a laugh in my heart than a gun in my hand, even if I had to choose between them when I was going to wake up in the night and find a burglar at the foot of the bed.

Smile—Keep on Smiling.
The burglar would be very apt to have a gun of his own, and I'm rather sure I should get the best of him when the laugh came in.

What burglar could go on burglarizing when somebody was sitting up in bed laughing at him? He'd think there wasn't much in the house to burglarize, in the first place, and in the second place he'd wonder if the woman who was laughing instead of screaming wasn't crazy or something. And by the time he got through wondering I'd be gone—or he would.

Laugh? Why, a good laugh is the best tonic, the best medicine, the best trouble-soother, the best link of understanding and the best friend in all the world.

You can lose your money and your health, and your youth and your friends, but you'll never lose your popularity—as long as you can laugh.

The one person on earth who is welcome everywhere—except at a funeral—is the man or the woman who can laugh.

Not a mean, little, snickering, stinky laugh that's not really a laugh at all, only a crowd of triumph or a sneer of disdain—but a real, hearty, joyous laugh with a peal of bells in it and a tambourine and a bass drum and all the rest of the "jazz" band, too.

The world looks blue or gray? You didn't get the right letter; the wrong person called you on the telephone and the right one didn't. You hate your new hat, and you'd like to murder the woman that sold you your fall coat? The income tax is due and where on earth are you going to get the money to pay it? The woman next door had a party and didn't ask you? Your husband said last night that he admired brunettes and your hair is red? Your little boy is behind his class in arithmetic and your little girl can't wear a pair of stockings a day without tearing a hole in the most conspicuous part of them? There isn't sun enough in the living room and the wind howls and the leaves begin to fall? Boo-hoo what's the use of living, any how?

There isn't—not a particle—not if you're going to be that kind of person. No one loves you and no one will love you, either—not till you smile.

Smile? Oh, yes, you can! You can think of something pleasant or something sweet, or something good-natured—but, best of all, think of something funny!

Hurrah for a Good Laugh!

The world is full of funny things! You are funny, so awfully funny that it makes me laugh just to think of you, and if you could only see right this minute you couldn't keep your face straight to save your life—no, you couldn't, and I wouldn't want you to, either.

I don't like to see people's faces straight. I like to see them all smiled out of shape—don't you?

What's it all about, anyhow, this worry and bother, these blues and these tantrums? Where do they get you?

Today is here. Yesterday is gone. And tomorrow—well, you can see about tomorrow when tomorrow gets here.

It's all a joke, anyhow—a short joke at that. Why don't you laugh while the laughing is good?

Come on, let's have a laugh together. You start and I'll join in—Ha-ha! Ho-ho!

No, I don't like He-he! It's too self-conscious and sniggling. There, don't you feel better already?

I do! Hurrah for a good laugh! I'd rather have it than a $10 gold piece.

"Is THAT a Picture of ME
After We're Married?"

Rather abrupt QUESTION.

Somewhat embarrassing SITUATION!

If modern methods are right and necessary in the shop, and store, and office, why are they not EQUALLY the thing in the HOME?

The wear-and-tear on the housewife who does the family wash by hand, same as women did a thousand years ago, is severe, and out of all proportion with the SAVING that is involved. There's a far better way!

WHY WORRY

About the High Prices of Shoes

By giving your shoes more care and attention, you will lengthen their life enough so that at the end of the year, when you figure up your shoe bills, you will be surprised at the moderate cost.

—POINTS TO CONSIDER—

Don't wear run-over heels. It spoils the shape of your shoes.

Don't wear shoes after the sole is worn through. It spoils the shape and welt. New welts cost money.

Use shoe trees for your shoes. They will wear better and look better.

Wear waterproof soles for wet weather.

Have Them Repaired The Quality Way

Bring them to us —
We will make them
